Helping Colleges Monetize IPv4 Addresses Safely

What is IPv4? IPv4, or Internet Protocol version 4, is a set of rules governing internet communication. It assigns unique addresses that route data across the internet.

Why Should You Care About IPv4 Addresses? When the internet was emerging, your college likely acquired a substantial number of IPv4 addresses to facilitate communication between campus devices and the broader internet. While many of these addresses are in use, there may be excess ones that remain unused. Given the finite nature of IPv4 addresses globally, these surplus addresses hold significant value for organizations looking to expand their internet connectivity.

Why Consider Selling Your Unused IPv4 Addresses? Selling unused IPv4 addresses can generate revenue and help you avoid the costs associated with maintaining addresses that are not actively used.

How Can You Sell Your Institution's Unused IPv4 Addresses? A trusted broker like Brander Group can identify potential buyers and guide you through the sale process, ensuring a transparent transaction without hidden fees or complex conditions.

What is the Value of Your Institution's Unused IPv4 Addresses? For instance, a /16 IPv4 subnet could be worth between $2 million to $2.75 million USD.

Will Your Institution Need These Addresses for Future Growth? Brander Group will collaborate with your IT department to assess future needs and ensure that you retain the necessary IPv4 addresses for your growth.
